

About Our Company

Since 1954, The M&T Company has been providing engineering, technical and manufacturing services to both the military and commercial community. In support of our Department of Defense Customers, as part of the CDI Government Services, we provide technical and management expertise for weapons systems, support equipment, aircraft launch and recovery equipment and fielded systems. Our support disciplines include a host of areas such as communication, navigation, fight control, and radar. We also provide specialized contractor engineering technical services and develop special software modeling programs for aircraft icing, biological particle contamination, mechanical shock and expeditionary airfield simulation.

Through our contract managed staffing program, we also provide contract staffing where our specialized engineers and technicians are available to support your project on a temporary or full time basis.
